Family Britain 1951 1957 Tales

As in his highly acclaimed Austerity Britain, David Kynaston invokes an astonishing array of vivid, intimate and unselfconscious voices to drive his narrative of 1950s Britain. The keen-eyed Nella Last shops assiduously at Barrow Market as austerity and rationing gradually give way to relative abundance; housewife Judy Haines, relishing the detail of suburban life, brings up her children in Chingford; the self-absorbed civil servant Henry St John perfects the art of grumbling.

In reading David Kynaston's Family Britain, 1951-1957, it is made abundantly clear that this is by no means a recent phenomenon. Those who complained this past January at having to wear an extra layer indoors or who balked at the cost of turning up their central heating might wish to spare a thought for an American visitor, Sylvia Plath, on a Fulbright Scholarship to Cambridge in the winter of 1955-56: 'I wear about five sweaters and wool pants and knee socks and I still can't stop ...
